“ Mr. Eddie and I climbed the stairs together. Both of us were exhausted as we were both somewhat infirm and found it difficult to climb those stairs. But climb we did several times that day, laughing, holding one another for support, and gladly sitting when we could.

In a great way, the quiet faith of Mr. Eddie was a strength and support for those of us in his life to lean upon. I can't wait to run the streets of gold with my dear friend, where we will not be winded or infirm, nor in pain.
