“ I was sad to hear about Danny’s death although I knew he was in considerable pain for a number of years due to spinal problems.

Danny was my lead technician when I supervised the B&W Hot Cell Facility at the Lynchburg Research Center for several years. No other technician or engineer at B&W was as skilled as Danny using the master-slave manipulators required for working on highly radioactive materials in the hot cells. Danny also had a lot of common sense and would devise methods and tools to make many of our one-of-a-kind jobs simpler and safer, and I would always consult with him before we took on a new task. Although I drifted away to other work at B&W while Danny stayed on at the hot cells, I will always have fond memories of my time working with Danny.

*My deepest condolences to Katherine and family.
