“ Ahhh Din. I miss you so much. Since I was born, you were there. You feature prominently in my memories of growing up. You were always kind and understanding, pleasant and loving. Always ready with a kind word or a helping hand. You were always more concerned with others happiness than your own. You sacrificed so that others would be happier. And you smiled doing it. I remember your stories of nursing school. When you bought your first pair of bluejeans because Mom and Dad always made you wear skirts and dresses. How you and your friends did a hundred up the Northway on your way to Saratoga. I remember your graduation, your wedding and the birth of your daughter Angie. It seems like God designed you to be a wife and mother. You were so GOOD at both. What a great cook and baker. And what a great listener. You always showed empathy for people in pain and always tried to help no matter the cost to yourself. I was very disappointed when you moved to Virginia but, I totally understand your reasons for doing so. You had to. I was just disappointed that my big sis wouldn't be around. You had a very hard life yet, you lived it with grace. You were so kind to children and animals though, I think, children were number one in your life. You were a dutiful daughter and wife, a loving mother and grandmother and most of all, to me, a wonderful sister. I hope you are at peace in heaven with no pain, surrounded by loved ones. ❤️ I love you Din and will miss you more than you can imagine until the day I see you again.
Your loving brother, Royal.
