“ Ms Gill was a very special friend that the Lord was gracious enough to have let enter my life. She was a tough cookie who made work at getting her to eat at Autumn Care. But the little Darling just LOVED her crackers! I would promise her crackers if she ate something and as I was helping others I had my eye on her. Well she would take a tiny bite and hold me to my word. Finally after “our game” she announced in a very firm voice “You’re bribing me!” I told her yes but if you want more crackers, you have to eat. It usually worked. I will never forget the last day I saw her. I knew she was in pain and I asked for her permission to give her a good night kiss which I usually did. She looked at me and smiled and I kissed her forehead. I am thankful to God for allowing me this special gift. Bless her and you her special family. Karen
